

Navigating Multistate Sales and Use Tax

The complexities of sales and use tax laws can be a burden to any business. The multitude of state and local tax rules and rates can impact how businesses operate.

While a business may only have a physical presence in one state, it may be selling products or services to customers located throughout the United States. This may result in businesses having to register, collect, and remit sales tax in multiple state and local tax jurisdictions.

It is extremely difficult for businesses to keep up and remain compliant in this current environment, but KBF is here to help.
